FIRST CHEAP WATCH

The Story of the Famous Old Long Winding Waterbury.

How the Connecticut Shoemaker's Idea Was Taken Up and Worked Out-A Timepiece That Came to Be Known All Over the World.

In a small country town in Connecticut lived a cobbler. He was a poor man and a peculiar one. The boys called him a "gene," and some thought him crazy. But he kept on in the even tenor of his way, living his own life and thinking his own thoughts. One of these thoughts was that he could make a watch that would have only three wheels.

A watchmaker out of a job heard of the cobbler and called at his little shop. This was the beginning of the famous Waterbury watch, which was the first cheap watch to be manufactured. It is now a thing of the past. But its cheap price and its remarkably long "wind" (it was a stem winder) were known around the world.

The Waterbury was named for the of the elderly people, and one of the best things to be used in rheumatic afflictions, relieving the aches and first difficulty in his path was lack of Having got the idea, the purchaser money. He looked about for a man with money enough, nerve enough and this mixture acts directly upon the imagination enough to lead him to render the financial aid without which no first step could be taken. He was found, because it was a Yankee with from the blood which is the cause of an indomitable will that was looking for him. "How much money will it take and how long a time do you want before you can begin to make your watches in sufficient quantities to make the thing a success," he inquired. "I will be frank with you," replied the inventor. "It will require $25,000, and I shall need eight months for preparation."

"Go shead," said the daring capital-He went shead. He met unexpected difficulties and had spent $250,000 and used up twenty-eight months before he turned out a single watch. But the capitalist never faltered. Then the factory, for which every piece of machinery had to be invented and specially made, turned out its first thou-

Not one of them would go! Among other things, it was found that the sheets of brass out of which were stamped the wheels of the watch had a grain somewhat like wood. The wheels cut out round would not stay

This difficulty being remedied, a second thousand watches were made. A ond thousand watches were made. A large number of these went, but the percentage of "stoppers" (watches that refused to go) was still too large. New study, new experiments, howthat only about 10 per cent were stoppers. The good watches were tested in six positions-lying on the face, on the back and in four positions on the edge. The maker of each part stamped his mark on the part he made, so that if fault was found in that part he must make it right. Then came the question of selling the watches, and over $500,000 was spent in the years of its vogue in advertising the Waterbury watch. Some of the methods used were interesting.

A negro minstrel troupe were paid to open their show by saying, "We have come from Waterbury, the land of eternal spring," referring to the long time required to wind the Waterbury

One day the owner of one of these timepieces was winding it on the train. Across the aisle a traveler noted that his neighbor was winding his watch. It caused no thought until a second look and then a third showed the winding still under way. Then the astonished man spoke, "Excuse me, sir, but are you winding a watch?"

"Yes," said the winding owner, "and I'm tired of it. You wind awhile, will you?" This led to explanations and resuited in the ordering by the stranger, who had never before seen a Waterbury, of 50,000 watches for the use of
